I have a UITapGestureRecognizer attached to each cell that is working fine. However, if I tap and hold on a cell, then tap another cell, I get an unexpected offset. I added a console to track when the gestureRecognizer is fired, and it is firing when expected, but I am still getting an unexpected offset. I have a feeling it has to do with scrolling. I am not actually changing the text of the cell, I am just going into edit mode and tapping a UILabel. Does anyone have any tips on tracking down this issue? A: In this particular case, we ended up deleting the cell from the tableview and adding it again. It ended up working as expected. Q: Need help with max function Hi guys I need some help with the max 82157476af
